CO-CREATING

USA LAY MARIST ASSEMBLY 2018

From July 18 – 20, over 75 lay Marists gathered at the San Alfonso Retreat Center in Long Branch, New Jersey, for the first assembly of lay Marists of the United States province.

The different sessions held during the assembly were themed The sorting hat, Discover, Dream, Design and Create and Co-Creating provocative propositions.

On July 18, 'The sorting hat' activity consisted of participants dividing themselves up into one of three "houses" – Mission, Spirituality, and Shared Life.

Participants were called to choose which part of the Marist charism they identify with the most and, in each "house" they discussed why they chose to participate in the assembly and what they hoped to accomplish in the assembly.

On July 19, there was a prayer walk on the beach during the 'Discover' session followed by a presentation given by both Pep Buetas (<https://bit.ly/2JUeo7U>), the codirector of the Secretariat of the Laity, and Patti Rios from Tijuana, Mexico.

During the session 'Dream', participants were divided into seven groups and each reflected on what they hope the new Lay Association will look like over the next five years.

The workshop 'Design and create' focused on drawing up concrete plans, such as a new website for lay Marists of the USA province and new social media accounts to publish their news.

On July 20, they discussed topics related to the province's lay Marists such as communications, leadership, local communities, national communities, formation programmes, and communion.

Several recommendations were made, such as monthly prayer gatherings in regional areas, a lay Marist newsletter, creation of lay Marist social media platforms, the creation of a Lay Marist steering committee, and a possible Director of Lay Marists in the province.

EUROPEAN TEAM OF YOUTH AND VOCATIONAL MINISTRY

FIRST EDITION OF THE ACCOMPANIMENT FOR DISCERNMENT PROGRAM

The European team of youth and vocational ministry promoted the first edition of the course in accompanying discernment, which held its last stage at the General House in Rome, Italy, from July 16 –22. The course started in July 2017.

“Everyone is a vocation and we all feel called to something by God,” said Brother Xavi Gual de Miguel, one of the coordinators of the course. “The task of a person that accompanies is to walk with others to help contrast and clarify how they can be happy and find meaning in their lives with the eyes of a God who is Father and Mother.”

After the first stage last July, the 23 participants – from the five Marist provinces of Europe – carried out seven months of work on some aspects of formation through an Internet platform from October to May.

It is a course that includes both theoretical and practical work, based on the participant’s own life and his experience of accompanying and being accompanied in the process of discernment; it is about experiencing it oneself to then be able to accompany others better.

In the provinces, accompaniment courses will be carried out, but the Marists responsible for youth and vocational ministry realised that they needed to be able to offer more specific formation at the regional level for certain moments of discernment in the lives of people.

The course is part of the vocation ministry project proposed by the European Marist Conference. The European team of youth and vocational ministry has different activities, courses and meetings during the year to reflect about accompaniment.

In addition, the team visits different realities of the European region to share with young people, laity and brothers what their expectations and needs are.

After evaluating this first edition of the course, the European team of youth and vocational ministry hopes to offer a second edition in July 2019.

ARGENTINA: 'PROGRAMME SYRIA'

CRUZ DEL SUR MAY COLLABORATE WITH THE ARGENTINIAN GOVERNMENT TO HELP HOST REFUGEES

The Cruz del Sur province is working on a possible collaboration with the government of Argentina in a programme that welcomes Syrian immigrants and refugees in the country.

This possible collaboration was addressed during a meeting at the Embassy of Canada in Buenos Aires on July 11, convened by the UN High Commissioner for Refugees, which was intended to promote the Programa Siria (Programme Syria) in Argentina.

In addition to representatives of the Marist province, the meeting was attended by the Embassy of Canada, the International Organisation for Migration, Dirección Nacional de Migraciones de la Argentina, Federación Argentina Lesbianas, Gays, Bisexuales y Trans, and two Canadian organisations that work with refugees and immigrants.

The programme, strongly promoted by the High Commissioner, involves individuals who register to be able to receive refugees, committing to provide them with shelter and food for a year.

In Argentina they do it via the Dirección Nacional de Migraciones and in Canada, via other organisations.

It is hoped that the refugees become self-sufficient within the year and so after that period these organisations evaluate the situation.

The state investigates for up to six months the family's capability to adequately welcome those interested and supports the family by offering its members courses in Arabic and on Syrian culture.

The government is responsible for the accompaniment of the host family and the immigrant or refugee, offering them support in sorting out their health, education and work.

At the end of the meeting, a draft of a possible agreement between the government of Argentina and the Marist province of Cruz del Sur was given to the team of the Dirección Nacional de Migraciones so that the Marists assume a similar role to the state: to be a link between Marist families that sign up to receive refugees.
